

CapeGazette.com

Studio 35 releases holiday single

Behavioral healthcare organization's healing arts program gets studio time.

By Molly MacMillan | Dec 21, 2013

Photo by: Molly MacMillan

Members of Studio 35 contributed vocals, production and artwork to their holiday single, Season of Light.

A new holiday single, "Season of Light," features the voices of children who sang as part of their therapy to overcome family addiction and mental illness disorders.

Produced in collaboration with area musicians Ed Shockley, Johnny Neel and Mid South Audio owner Kevin Short among others, the new single is a holiday song written by Joe Dziobek, director of Fellowship Health Resources, a Rhode Island-based company that operates in seven states.

The company's Studio 35 serves both children and adult clients, who also created the CD cover art and helped produce the single as part of their recovery program.

"The kids, they don't come to a recording studio to have fun. They come as part of their therapy," Dziobek said. "They are coming here to have a successful experience."

Studio 35's single, "Season of Light" is available on Amazon, iTunes and CD Baby.